Model Number NED7200TW Brand Amana Age 6-10 Years Hello! I researched and replaced the dryer heater and confirmed that there was a break in the wire; however, it still does not heat up. Before that, for a few days it took several cycles to dry, then it stopped heating up altogether. I hooked up the wires just as they came out: the front set was red on top, blue on the bottom. The next 2 wires attachments (I didn't disable the wires, just what they were connected to). In another video, however, they have a blue wire on top and a red one at the bottom. Can this make a difference? I take the pictures to make sure I put it back in the same way. Can a broken heater break another part that needs to be fixed? You may have to blow out the heat fuse too, its located on your body of the heating element, so it still doesn't heat up. Here's a heat fuse for your model! Heat fuse WP35001193 There is a video in the link part that shows you how ohm check out that heat fuse. Turn off the dryer first! The reason takes a long time to dry the load and these parts come out you have ventilation restrictions on the outside of your home. Go outside your home and see if your vent dryer is clogged with lint. Also, pull the dryer off the wall and see if its clogged with lint in that your exhaust is where it goes to the wall.
